FOREMOST AUTHORITY FAVORED MILE RACES

By J. W. MARCHBANK

John Porter, Ormonde's trainer, was convinced horses would last as long running races from one to two miles as they do continually running in shorter races. The famous conditioner, who knew the game thoroughly, held the opinion the strain on horses is not half as great in contests at a worthwhile distance as in the "pillar-to-post" driving to which they are subjected in abbreviated scrambles.

I have set forth on many occasions my conviction that races should be at one mile or more and I am always gratified at finding men of the widest experience are of similar mind. I never hesitated, for example, in reaching the determination to make the Tanforan Futurity one mile.

Porter lived quite some years ago but it is hard to disagree with hardly any of his views. He was what can truly be called a "modern." He made racing a deep study and never expressed any ideas until giving full consideration to every angle of the subject.

As is the case with many men eminent in their calling, Porter did not have a bit of jealousy in his make-up. PAR-ENTHETICALLY IT MAY BE SAID JEALOUSY OF THE WORST KIND HAS RETARDED THE DEVELOPMENT OF RACING ON THE RIGHT LINES IN OUR OWN STATE. But to return to the more interesting subject of the horses themselves.

The noted trainer was not in any sense a "know-it-all" and willingly enough set down for the benefit of posterity the notions of friends, such as Joseph Osborne, breeder and owner. Osborne believed the fundament of the thoroughbred was being undermined by the undue increase in sprint racing, and especially by the style of training supposed to be necessary for success in the sprints.

CHILDRENS CHRISTMAS TREE PARTY PROVES GREAT SUCCESS

One Of Largest Crowds
Ever Assembled In Daly
City Is Present To Participate.

More than a thousand children between the ages of 2 and 14 years enjoyed an outdoor Christmas Tree Party at the plaza facing The Daly City Hall, on Sunday evening last. Also enjoying the affair hugely, at least the same number of adults were assembled on Wellington in front and adjacent to the City Hall.

The party was arranged by representatives of the Daly City Merchants Association, the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Colma Vista Grande Aerie of Eagles, The Community Welfare Association, Hillcrest Circle of Druids and several other civic and fraternal organizations.

A large and handsome Christmas tree stood on the lawn and attracted the admiration of all. The tree was decorated by A. J. Bodien, superintendent, and other employees of the Daly City Water Department, who also erected the platform for the entertainers and announcers.

The entertainment consisted of a number of unusual and difficult dance numbers, rendered by members of the dancing classes from Miss Rose's studio. Several accordion duets and solos were also on the program and were greatly enjoyed.

Each child received a bag of candy, apples and a toy from the women of the committee, who had charge of this branch of the celebration.

All the children enjoyed the affair to the utmost and are to be commended for the unusual manner in which they helped by keeping in line and maintaining order. The grownups also enjoyed the entertainment.

The chairman of the general committee wishes to thank all the committee members and others who assisted in making this wonderful chil-

YOUNG WOMAN BEACH SUICIDE

Nervous Breakdown Is Said
To Be Cause Of Self Destruction

Rockaway Beach held another rendezvous with death last Sunday, when Miss Marjorie Helen Bates of San Francisco drove to beach road and committed suicide beneath her automobile exhaust pipe.

The body was removed to Lasswell's Mortuary where it is being held pending the arrival of her mother, Mrs. Matilda Bates of Los Angeles, who wired San Mateo County authorities that she will claim the body.

Funeral services were conducted at 11 o'clock, Tuesday morning of this week.

The date for the inquest has not yet been set.

The authorities believe that Miss Bates took her life as the result of a nervous breakdown.

THANKS FOR SCHOOLS

The teachers of the Jefferson, Woodrow Wilson and Crocker Schools wish to extend to the taxpayers of the Jefferson School District, appreciation for the beautiful structures which have been erected, knowing that the more comfortable buildings will be a great advantage to both scholars and teachers.

HOLD DEDICATORY EXERCISES FOR THREE GRAMMAR SCHOOLS

Prominent Speakers Extend Felicitations To People
On Completion Of Structures.

Last Sunday saw the last of the three new grammar school buildings dedicated.

The Woodrow Wilson was dedicated in the morning at 10 o'clock and the Crocker in the afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The speakers at the exercises were Roy W. Cloud, executive secretary of the California Teachers Association; Charles Morris, dean of the San Mateo Junior College; R. L. Crane Jr., district superintendent of schools; Trustees William J. Sweeney and Louis Nava of the Jefferson School District; trustees Mrs. Stella Jensen and Andrew Vireno of the Jefferson Union High School District; Mayor H. H. Smith of Daly City and W. E. Pitschke, editor of the Daly City Record.

Reverends Gill and Stevenson offered prayer and the flags were raised by the Boy Scouts of Troops 148 and 149. Scout Masters Bradford and Cramer led the audience in the "Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag."

After the exercises the fathers and mothers were escorted through both buildings and inspected them carefully.

These buildings will be ready for occupancy by the children when school opens on Monday, January 13, 1936.

ELEMENTARY GRADES HAVE GRADUATION

"KNOCKERS" CALL ON PRESIDENT FOR ACTION

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Utter foolishness characterizes the frothings of the maddened opponents of the up-and-doing Roosevelt administration. So it is with mingled emotion that one runs across agreement in the anti-Roosevelt press with any idea of the chief executive. It does happen, however. It is on the subject of currency stabilization.

The discussion is a timely one, as the stabilization fund of this country expires on January 30. A financial writer in an anti-Roosevelt newspaper comes out flatfootedly in favor of continuation of the fund, at least for one year more, and gives cogent reasons for his opinion. And how can the life of the fund be extended?

By none other than by an order by President Roosevelt himself. The leader of our nation is of some use after all and his usually unreasoning enemies have to admit it.

The stabilization fund was established in January, 1934, to serve as protector of the new valuation of the dollar and as the contribution of the United States toward effecting worldwide stabilization. The new situation arises from the fact the hoped-for stabilization has not yet shown up.

It is acknowledged that the Roosevelt plan in currency has been a success when the expert on finance declares the two thousand million dollars set aside out of gold devaluation profits to create the fund have provided the United States dollar with a reasonable degree of stability and that the fund provides us with a mobile force with which to meet each new twist in the ever-shifting currency problem.

Some people never seem to see the light. The National Association of Manufacturers does not see eye to eye with the president and despite the fact that the country was saved by the federal government's assistance to business the association has put itself on record as favoring so-called principles that were observed during the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover era. And what came from that observation of apparently obsolete rules?

The depression.

As has been pointed out by keen analysis the position of the association is contradictory:

Its members hold that the government, which in this new economic era must make business safe and stabilize the national economy, is not to control what it finances. We have not forgotten that in the depression these opponents of the Roosevelt regime were the men who refused to take their losses and insisted on being bailed out by government money.

Sidney Norman points out in a graphic way in the Vancouver Sun that the development of air-freighting to out-of-the-way mining districts constitutes one of the most romantic new phases of the industry. In new regions in Northern British Columbia, Quebec, Northwest Territories and Manitoba, transportation of machinery and men by airplane has become a matter of everyday occurrence.

Howard Brubaker in The New Yorker:

Those who understand the money problem ask us to worry about the enormous flood of gold coming into the United States. If you have caught up with your back worrying, start on that.

STREET CAR AND TRUCK COLLIDE

Accident On Mission Street
Results In Considerable Damage And Injury To Motorman.

A truck loaded with gravel, traveling in a southerly direction on Mission street, collided with a number 14 car of the Market Street Railway System about noon time, Thursday of this week at the intersection of Templeton avenue and Mission street.

Fred Johnson, the motorman of the wrecked street car was removed to the Villa Sanatorium, suffering from lacerations of the face and leg and arm and possible internal injuries. The impact of the vehicles threw the loaded dump of the truck off onto the sidewalk.

The plate glass window of the Reliable Shoe Shop, 5995 Mission street, were broken by flying fragment of debris and rock.

The truck was driven by Douglas Bishop, 34 Hermosa street, Millbrae, and was owned by L. C. Smith, of 235 Third avenue, San Mateo. The rock was being hauled for the cement job at the Crocker School.

Joe Silva, the conductor of the street car, and the truck driver were uninjured.

The front end of the street car was completely demolished.

MYSTERY DEATH OF YOUNG LAD

Frederick Roland Daniels, aged 7, of 226 Crocker avenue, was found dead in his bed at home by his mother, Mrs. Grace L. Daniels, Sunday morning of this week.

The little fellow complained of feeling ill about 5 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. His mother put him to bed about 5:30, and, thinking the illness a slight one, she did not call a doctor.

About 10:30 the same evening Mrs. Daniels carried her husband's lunch to him at a service station where he is employed and did not return home until an early hour Sunday morning, when she found the boy lying, face down, on his pillow. Unable to arouse him she hastily summoned Dr. W. C. Lynch from the Villa Sanatorium. Dr. Lynch pronounced the lad dead when he arrived.

The funeral services were conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., Tuesday afternoon of this week at 2 o'clock. Cremation was at Olivet Memorial Park in Lawndale.

COYOTE POINT IS FAVORED FOR NEW AIR BASE

Meeting To Effect Permanent Organization To Carry On Work Of Propaganda.

At the San Mateo City Hall on Tuesday morning a permanent organization was perfected to campaign in favor of Coyote Point in San Mateo County for the Pacific Coast's U. S. naval air base.

At this meeting at which Congressman John J. McGrath was present, practically all mayors of Peninsula cities were in attendance as well as members of the County Board of Supervisors and other prominent civic leaders.

Mayor Frank Simmen was named permanent chairman, Mayor C. A. Buck, vice chairman, and Manager Gilbert Kettle of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, secretary.

A ways and means committee consisting of three delegates from San Francisco, eight from San Mateo County and one from Palo Alto, was tentatively approved by the assemblage, but no appointments were made at this time.

Supervisor Al Witt of Daly City said that funds to send a representative to the East were the first necessity and advised that all mayors contact their city councils as soon as possible on the matter.

Those attending the meeting included Mayor Hugh H. Smith, Daly City; Mayor Asa Hull, San Carlos; Mayor C. H. Lambert, Redwood City; Mayor J. H. Judson, Palo Alto; Mayor Buck, Burlingame; Mayor Simmen, San Mateo; Supervisors Manuel Francis, John Poole, Al Witt and Walter High; Percy Shaw, president Peninsula Industrial Conference; C. A. Keyston; Ed Brady; A. V. Bowhay, representing Mayor Rossi and Administrator Cleary of San Francisco; Roscoe Wyatt, Redwood City Chamber of Commerce; City Manager E. P. Wilsey, San Mateo, and Alvin Hatch, Half Moon Bay.

DALY CITY BAND AT EAST-WEST GAME

The Daly City Band will again participate in the Shrine East-West football game. The Daly City Eagles will also take part.

The game is for the benefit of the Shrine Hospital for crippled children, and will take place at Kezar Stadium on New Years Day at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

THE REASON

Last evening, while The Record forms were on the newspaper press, there was a complete breakdown of that machine.

It was necessary to send some parts to the machine shop for replacement. Hence we could not print the paper until Friday forenoon. If your Record is late in delivery, this will explain the reason for the delay.

FIREMEN AND GUESTS ENJOY BIG BANQUET

Members And Friends Of Station No. 3 Make Merry At Festal Board

On Saturday of last week members and guests of Station No. 3 held a banquet at Dante Alighieri Cafe on Mission street.

Frie Commissioner J. Soares, chairman of the arrangement committee, deserves much credit for the way this banquet was handled.

Captain T. Wickersham welcomed the guests and firemen of Station No. 3 to the party, after which Mayor H. H. Smith was asked to say a few words, which were heartily received by those present.

Chief A. P. Chesney was then asked to say something to his brave firemen of Station No. 3, and his talk was also well received. Councilman P. Selmi, a member of Station No. 3, gave the party a nice little talk and Councilman J. Twisten delivered a welcoming address. Councilman J. J. Fahey also stated his opinion was that the party was a great success. Assistant Chiefs F. Hanson, A. Bodien and A. Silicani made a few happy remarks. Commissioner E. Forsell of Station No. 2 also wished all present a Merry Xmas. J. Soares said he was glad all were present and having a good time. Captain Wickersham was very busy and was also pleased all present were having a good time.

After the dinner was served the firemen and their wives enjoyed dancing until the wee hours of the morning. Many good stories were told during the dinner by several members. Councilman H. Sunderman sent his regrets because he was unable to attend.

The dinner menu was composed of andive salad with tuna fish, beets, celery, Italian dressing; consommé with fromage graté; spaghetti Italian with cheese, roast turkey, cranberry sauce; cauliflower, Italian style; mashed potatoes, ice cream, petite fours and demi tasse.

Among those present were Captain and Mrs. T. Wickersham, Chief and Mrs. A. P. Chesney, Assistant Chief and Mrs. F. Hanson, Assistant Chief and Mrs. A. Bodien, Assistant Chief and Mrs. A. Silicani, Mayor and Mrs. H. H. Smith, Councilman and Mrs. J. Twisten, Councilman and Mrs. P. Selmi, Councilman and Mrs. J. J. Fahey, Commissioner J. Soares, Fire Commissioner and Mrs. E. Forsell, Mr. and Mrs. H. Loring, Miss Alice Lorenz, Mr. and Mrs. S. Passafiumi, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kennedy, Mrs. J. Ferro, Mr. and Mrs. A. Green, Miss Catherine Lyons, Mr. and Mrs. M. Johnson, Mrs. Fryer, M. Heskovitz, W. Goldkuhl Sr., Mrs. A. Selmi, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cuneo, Mr. Tachi, Mr. Duffy and guest, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lang, F. Schmidt.

Regrets were expressed by Captain Wickersham that Comrade A. Cameron could not be present as he is ill in the hospital at Oroville.

ROD AND GUN CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

The Daly City Rod and Gun Club, at its last regular meeting of 1935, held nomination and election of officers. Mr. Les Langford was elected as our new president; Ed Moore, vice president; Dick Ennis, secretary; L. Rusting, treasurer; H. Gambler, sergeant at arms; Bill Grantham, editor.

The Board of Directors includes our past president, A. J. Bodien; past secretary, Doc. Kost; Judge Johnson, Dr. A. J. Rankin, Les Volkman and Fred Wagner. Delegates, Ed Moore, Dick Ennis and Fred Wagner, and last but not least, our irreplaceable one and only George Wheeler. George will do his best, as in the past, to keep Daly City on the map.

It was also decided to hold all future meetings on the third Friday of each month.

The year of 1935 goes down in our records as a most successful year as a sportsmen's club, which has seen many favorable bills enacted in our state Legislature for the good of California sportsmen.

The coming year bids fair to see many more laws enacted that will eventually lead to the increase of all species of fish and game and place our field and stream sports on a basis to compare favorably with conditions of thirty years ago. Great praise should go to our California sportsmen and affiliated clubs for their great work of the past few years, without which we should have been in a sorry state. State organization is chiefly responsible for all of this, and the coming year will no doubt see all of the clubs of the southern part of the state coming into the fold. What a powerful body of sportsmen that will be. Let us dedicate the year 1936 to the conservation and protection of all of our fish and game; protect them from depredations and use our combined power to have all laws passed that favor our fish and game. Get back of the Legislature that favors our plans, and do not forget how to deal with those opposed to our interests.

We have elected a snappy bunch of officers and with the sage advice of our old officers gives promise of a prosperous 1936. Let's all go places behind our club and the A. S. of C. The club wishes a Happy and Prosperous New Year to all of our affiliated sportsmen.

RELIEF REDUCTION

Beginning with January first, families on relief in San Mateo County will have to be content with a five per cent reduction in their budgets, according to word received from Captain L. G. McAloney, SERA director in this county.

This reduction is made necessary, declared the relief director until the WPA program can absorb the entire load of unemployment in the state, now receiving direct relief aid. This is in line with the schedule to be adopted throughout the state after the new year.

which will be shown at the Daly City Theater, Sunday and Monday, December 29 and 30.

The stars are Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Berry, together again for the first time in almost five years.

And it is a stirring story of adventure and romance, a story that teems with lusty action and abounds with strange emotional qualities that brings them together.

All the action takes place aboard the wheezy old liner Kin Lung as it plows down the coast between Hong-kong and Singapore, with the white passengers in the cabins and the cool-

PRESIDENT FETES STUDENT CLASS

Has Large Gathering At Home For Graduate Members

On Friday evening last, the graduates of Crocker School were entertained at an evening party at the home of the president of Crocker Parent Teacher Association, Mrs. Bernadine Lewis. Twenty-eight members of the graduating class attended. The evening was spent dancing, playing games and community singing. Several selections were sung by the members of the Glee Club and some of the talented boys and girls.

Mrs. Lewis had her social hall decorated in Christmas colors and a beautiful tree occupied a place of honor. Souvenir caps in green and white, the school colors, were made by the aunt of one of the graduates, Mrs. Nell Caine.

At the close of the evening dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses. The chaperones were Mrs. Bernadine Lewis, Mrs. Nell Caine, Mrs. Julia V. Jordan, Mrs. I. Gimovsky, Mrs. Ethel Dorn and Mrs. M. Eldridge.

On Friday afternoon of last week, the members distributed one hundred and seventy pop corn balls to the students of Crocker School who have been attending Woodrow Wilson School, and a committee from Crocker assisted at the Christmas Party at General Pershing School for those who have been attending there.

At the graduating exercises on Thursday evening the president, Mrs. Lewis, presented a school ring to Irving Gimovsky, who won it by his excellent work and high character rating during his years in Crocker School.

The next regular meeting will be postponed from the second Tuesday of January to the third Tuesday, which will be the twenty-first. We hope that many of the mothers will meet with us at our first meeting in our beautiful new school. Crocker has never before had any regular meeting place in the school and has had to meet wherever it was possible to secure a place. We feel that now we have such a splendid place to hold our activities in our own school that we are going to progress rapidly and do really constructive work for the students.

Help your community by patronizing your home merchants.

CHURCH PROGRAM GREAT SUCCESS

For several months the boys and girls of the Grace Nazarene Sunday School have looked forward to a Christmas program, at which time they would be again visited by old Santa.

Monday evening of this week was the time set and 235 were on hand. The boys and girls spoke their pieces and sang their songs in the most beautiful way. The adults acted their part equally as well. The real spirit of Christmas was manifested by all.

John R. Young, the Sunday School Superintendent, made many nice remarks about the pastor and his wife and then capped it by presenting them with a purse which the members and friends had gotten together. That was a nice way he had of saying, "Merry Christmas to you."

At the end of the greatly enjoyed evening old Santa sure enough came down through the belfrey and stepped into the auditorium, where the kiddies were anxiously waiting. The only way he could be distinguished was that he had his arms loaded with candy bags.

One and all left the church realizing that it is an asset to the community.

KING & PAXTON FIRM DISSOLVED

The partnership recently formed, known as King & Paxton, Used Car Dealers, at 6601 Mission street, has been dissolved.

The business will be conducted at the same address in future by Pat King.

The business of dealing in used cars will continue as before, while a repair department has been added to the one stop service.

JUNIOR AUXILIARY GIRLS ENTERTAINED

The American Legion Junior Auxiliary were delightfully entertained at a Christmas party, Saturday evening of last week at the home of their chairman, Mrs. Marcie Treir, on Woodrow street.

The evening was spent playing games and Mrs. Treir presented each of her guests with a Christmas gift. Refreshments were served to about twenty members at the conclusion of the evening.

LEGION UNITS HOLD SEVERAL XMAS PARTIES

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, held its regular meeting last Wednesday evening. Reports and holiday activities occupied the business session. Delicious refreshments were served after the business was disposed of.

On Thursday evening President Hilda Przborski presented the American Legion Auxiliary scholarship award to Kenneth Church of the Woodrow Wilson School at the graduation exercises.

Friday evening the Annual Joint Christmas Tree Party was held for the children. The Junior Girls and the Sons of the Legion presented a very entertaining program. Santa Claus came in and gave each child a gift and sweets. Every one present had an enjoyable evening.

Saturday evening, the Junior Girls had a meeting and a Christmas Party at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Marcia Trier.

All members please take note that the next regular meeting will be held on Thursday evening, January 2.

The president and her officers are taking this opportunity to wish every one the Happiest season's Greetings.

SEASON'S MOST EXCITING FILM AT LOCAL HOUSE

Adventure, Romance And Intrigue Take Place Off Chinese Coast In Plot

Three of filmland's most brilliant stars add to their laurels in the spectacular production, "China Seas," ies crowded into the fore-castle. Gable is the hard-bitten young skipper. Miss Harlow is an exotic of the Oriental ports who is not ashamed to show her love for Gable. Berry is apparently a bluff trader in pigs, but his obvious occupation masks his more sinister activities as the "brains" of the pirates.

A triangular love story develops, with lovely Rosalind Russell as the contender for Gable's affections. Too, scenes of the ship wrecked in the typhoon, and of the capture of the vessel, led by Ivan Lebedeff, are among the most exciting seen on the screen in many seasons.

The second attraction is "The Affairs of Susan," with Zasu Pitts and Hugh O'Connell.

Continuous show—New Years Day, Wednesday, January 1, 1936.

Charged with holding her eight-year-old daughter's arm over a flame "to make her a good girl," Mrs. Consuela Aceledo, of Los Angeles, was sentenced to jail for 180 days.

DALY CITY NO. 1 TOWNSEND CLUB

The Townsend Club of Daly City held its monthly meeting, Friday of last week, in the City Hall.

Paul Selmi, president, introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Shaefer of Vacaville, who gave an interesting talk, after which he answered many questions.

The club is contemplating holding two meetings each month, the dates not definitely decided as yet.

The social committee, composed of Mrs. Nagle and Mrs. Chesney, is arranging for a whist party, Wednesday, January 15.

The club now has 337 members enrolled.

Wilbur Shaw of Ogden, Utah, has lived in the same house for 72 years.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lilith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie. Garth experiences difficulties in getting his companions into line.

Though Garth had no pad, he stood up with the moose quarter on his back and lifted his end of the pole to his shoulder. But he was accustomed to packing. He bore the meat on his pack-board and his half of the two quarters on the pole with as little difficulty as Huxby toted the other end of the pole.

When they reached the camp Miss Ramill and her father were out gathering wood. At one end of the fire, thick smoke was rising from green sticks and leaves; at the other end, the pan of sliced muffle was boiling hard. After he and Huxby had lifted the moose quarters upon the rack, Garth brought water in the aluminum pot and cooled down the stew to simmering heat. Miss Ramill had much to learn about the culinary art.

After the meal Garth glanced at the red after-glow of sunset.

"Mr. Ramill, the leanto and blanket are for you and your daughter. Huxby can take the lee side of the fire. I'll keep it going. Turn in whenever you please."

A yawn surprised Lilith Ramill into a mocking laugh. She turned to her swollen-faced fiancé.

"What a howling farce, Vivian! Can you imagine me going to roost at sunset, instead of sunrise?"

Huxby forced a smile and felt at a particular sore cluster of bites on the back of his neck. Mr. Ramill cast a wistful glance towards the leanto.

"I presume, Lilith, you will prefer not to share the hut with me. Perhaps I can manage out here beside the fire, like Vivian."

"No," Garth differed. "You'll sleep under that blanket until you have hardened into shape, and you'll turn in now. It's been a big day for you."

The girl bridled. "How about my wishes—and the proprieties?"

"We'll leave that to you," Garth replied. "If you consider it improper to share the blanket with your father, you're welcome to sit up and help me grain these moosehides."

Huxby stiffened. "None of your insolence! You'll treat Miss Ramill with utmost respect."

"The lady shall receive from me all the respect to which she shows herself entitled," Garth said. "Why not make it mutual, all around?"

Lilith Ramill was no less completely outmaneuvered than the engineer. She spoke to her father: "Well, I must say, Dad, if you're letting him order you around, I refuse to stay up and slave all night. Come on."

He crept after her into the brush leanto. Garth at once set to making more catgut. Huxby had gathered a thin padding of spruce tips and moss at the far side of the fire and lay down. Like the girl and her father, he soon fell asleep.

After finishing his first task, Garth tended the fire and added water to the simmering muffle stew. He next began graining the hair from the moose bull hide. He could have stretched out and gone to sleep no less readily than had the chechahocs. On the other hand, he was able to keep awake as long as he wished. He scraped steadily at the coarse moose hair, the while his ears drank in the voices of the Wild.

By the time the sun glared over the jagged crests on the northeast wall of the valley, Garth had the hair grained from both the moose hides. As he started to cut into the larger skin, Miss Ramill crawled from the leanto. She blinked and yawned, straightened her rumpled sports skirt, and sat down to lace her boots. He gave her a friendly good morning.

"Good? Pah!" she scoffed. "I feel like the morning after. Here I am flat. Not a drop of anything for a brace; no bath; no clothes or face cream or lotions; no make-up! Not even a cigarette! Yet you have the face to gibe me about it!"

At that, he could not resist giving her the old quip: "Cheer up; the worst is yet to come."

She ignored it to point at the simmering muffle in the gold pan. "Look at that filthy mess; half full of ashes. If you had a spark of decency, you'd throw it out and warm me a pan of water for my face and hands."

He finished the cutting of a moccasin piece before he replied: "In the first place, I'm too busy performing needed work to act as lady's maid. In the second place, that muffle is not filthy. You'll say it's the most delicious aspic you ever tasted. About the rest, douse your head in the rill. That will give you a combined wash and brace. If you wish a smoke, there's the fire. For cosmetics, I'll soon be making up a batch of grease and pitch mosquito dope. My final dose of frogite went on too thin to last long."

She looked her disgust. "Grease and pitch! When I have a headnet?"

"Soon as we start traveling through brush it's a question which will go first, your net or your stockings. Dope doesn't snag on branches, and you'll find it a better cosmetic than rouge and powder."

"Ugh! If I use your nasty dope at all, it will be on my legs."

"No go. You'll be scraping against rocks and running upon snags. Won't have any knees left if you try the Highland style. How about those lynx skins for leggings, along with moose moccasins?"

For the first time since they had met, the girl gave him a genuinely friendly smile. "That's decent of you, Alan. How soon can you make them?"

"Cut me a steak off that nearest leg of moose. While you're cooking it, I'll see what can be done."

When she returned the knife and started to broil the great slab of meat she had sliced off, he laid out the pair of lynx skins. A few knife strokes cut off the great hair-padded paws and slit the legs into thongs. When the girl brought him his broiled moose steak, he showed her how to wrap a skin around each leg like a high-topped legging, tying it with the crossed thongs.

"There you are, Miss Ramill. It's a pair of leggings such as our ancestors wore when they pirated the high seas in viking ships and sailed up the Thames with Hengist and Horsa."

Huxby sat up, blinking. The thin shake-down of moss and spruce tips had done little to soften the stony ground. He rubbed his stiffened back and hips. "Confound those rocks!"

The engineer looked at the partly eaten steak in Garth's hand. "How about breakfast?"

"Help yourself to all you want. Along with your own, you might broil steaks for Miss Ramill and her father. Miss Ramill is about to take a lesson in sewing. She will soon need a pair of moccasins."

The last remark checked the girl's intended refusal. While Huxby silently cut the three steaks and started to cook them, she carried out Garth's suggestion to grease her lynx skins with a chunk of fat.

When Garth finished his meal, he threaded a needle with smoked catgut and showed the girl how to sew the thick moosehide. Holes punched with the awl made the work fairly easy. Within a few minutes she caught the knack of handling the awl and needle. Though her stitches were irregular, they promised to hold. He cut out the mate of the first moccasin, and another pair smaller in size.

Mr. Ramill crawled from the leanto, stiff, hungry and irritable. But sleep and the open air had whetted all appetites. As with the broiled liver, the three chechahocs—millionaire, mining engineer and fastidious heiress—went at the hot meat with fingers and teeth. They were down to bedrock—to the fundamentals of living. All the elegancies of civilized eating were absent, even the supposed necessities—forks, plates, seasonings. Yet the essentials remained. They were hungry, and here was food. It was neither as tender nor as savory as had been the liver. None the less, it was food.

At the end of the meal, Garth said that the first need was to fetch in the forelegs of moose. Miss Ramill rose with her father and Huxby.

"Sorry," Garth told her. "Your father needs all the walking he can get. Someone must stay to mind the fire. I might mention there's a shallow rock pool a little way along the bank, beyond those alders. You'd find the water pleasantly warm for a dip."

"Really? That's not so bad."

"Yes. Only be sure to keep the fire going. It will hold off the wolves and wolverines."

Huxby took Ramill's arm and started off with him after Garth. They kept in the rear all the way to the muskeg swamp.

This time, instead of lynx mates, a family of wolves were feasting on the moose meat. As sight of the men, the whole family bristled and growled but started a slow retreat.

"Shoot, Garth!" urged Mr. Ramill. "They're making off."

"Quite all right," Garth replied. "Good thing they're gorged. I might have had to waste cartridges to get rid of them. What I'd like to know is why they chose this solid meat, instead of the offal."

As if in answer to the question, a snarling growl far deeper than that of the wolves came from the border of the muskeg where Garth had killed the bull moose. Up out of the thicket reared a huge gray head. Massive forelegs stroked apart the willow stems with chisel-like claws eight inches or more long.

It was a grizzly—a full-grown ursus horribilis. Garth believed the beast to be as large as those monsters of the same breed that ruled over the southern Rockies and the Sierras in the early days when Indians still were armed only with bows, and the few white hunters carried only muzzle-loading flintlocks.

The ears of the great she-bear were flattened back. Her little pig eyes glared red. The monstrous jaws gaped to let out a roar of defiance that shook the solid ground.

"Good G—d!" Mr. Ramill gasped. "A—bear!"

Huxby gripped Garth's shoulder. "Shoot, d—n you! Shoot, or give me that rifle!"

"Shut up," Garth ordered him. "That roar is only a warning. She'll not charge if we mind our own affairs. You and Mr. Ramill take hold of that nearest untorn leg and start off quietly. Don't hurry and don't run."

The cool certainty of Garth's tone compelled belief and obedience even from Huxby. Mr. Ramill was already reaching up for one of the two moose legs that had not been pulled down by the wolves. The engineer hastily turned to help him. As they started off, Garth took the other unmangled leg on his shoulder and sauntered after them.

The grizzly mother had not repeated her roar. Had they run or given any sign of hostility, she would have charged. As it was, she stood, an enormous quivering mass of curiosity, watching their quiet retreat. Her jaws had closed their ferocious yaw, and her ears were no longer flattened back.

Garth's gray eyes twinkled as he glanced back over his shoulder at the huge bear. He could not have asked for a better bugaboo to make his companions behave. Safe out of her sight, he told the two to halt and get the moose leg on a tote-pole. Huxby at once started to curse him for not shooting.

"Go try it yourself," Garth replied, and when Huxby drew away from the offered rifle, he nodded approval. "You are wise not to attack a she-grizzly with cubs."

Spurred on no doubt by the knowledge of that gray monster behind him, Mr. Ramill managed to hold up his end of the tote-pole all the way to camp. There he sank down, purple-faced, wheezing that the exertion had killed him.

His daughter sat by the fire brooding. Though refreshed by her bath in the warm pool, she had begun to feel the craving for drink and tobacco. She had done little stitching on the moccasins. But she listened to horrified alertness when Huxby told about the grizzly.

Garth forestalled an outburst of hysterics. "Keep cool. The old lady will let us alone if we keep clear of her cubs. Keep up the fire, and she will shy clear of you. She doesn't fancy fire. Burnt her paws trying to rob me of a roasting porcupine."

A look at the gold pan showed Garth that the moose muffle had begun to dissolve. He cooled some of the gelatinous broth in the small pot. Mr. Ramill not only gulped down the drink. He smacked his lips and asked for more. At that both Huxby and the girl were stirred to try the rich drink.

Garth was glad to have all three take their fill of the savory, highly nourishing dish. He knew what was coming. He asked only that the pan be refilled to dissolve more of the muffle.

The three were accustomed to the free drinking of their kind. They had already begun to feel the lack of the usual cocktails, mealtime wines and between-meals whisky. This was aggravated by the lack of tobacco. To ease them as much as possible, he broiled lynx meat on a grating of willow stems, basting it with moose fat. The tender meat kept them occupied until the muffle broth soothed their jangled nerves.

There was a limit, however, to eating, and once its effect began to pass, their craving returned more intense than before. First Miss Ramill, then Huxby, and last of all Mr. Ramill began to make ironical remarks aimed at Garth. He ignored them for some time. The remarks became more offensively witty and sarcastic. He dropped the moccasin upon which he had been sewing, and picked up his rifle.

"I've had enough bitters and sour berries, thank you all. Feed them to yourselves for a while. I'll go get the sleep I missed last night while acting as guardian angel of your sweet slumbers."

CHAPTER V

Mate Woman.

Far up the tundra slope, above the trough of his platinum placer, Garth found a dry moss-bedded nook on the sunny side of a boulder. He lay down, pulled his hatbrim over his eyes, and let himself fall asleep.

A full eight hours later the sun swung around its wide circle until the shadow of the rock fell upon Garth. Roused by the passing of the warm rays, he pushed back his hat and sat up. He came down to the camp. Mr. Ramill sat beside the fire between his daughter and Huxby. Two of three pouches that Garth had hidden under the moss in the leanto lay open before the men.

Miss Ramill was emptying the last contents of the sugar pouch into a pot of thick tea. She was first to see Garth's noiseless approach.

"Hail to the chief," she mocked. "My dear Mr. Garth, you are most fashionably late to dinner. Will you not join us in a cup of tea?"

Her father turned to eye the uninvited guest with a shade of uneasiness. "You see we found what you were holding out on us, Garth. It's the only trick you failed to put over." Huxby said nothing. He tensed, ready to spring up and fight.

Finland's National Bath Is Worth Talking About

In some country districts of Finland, both sexes frequently share the same vapor bath, for preparing the "sauna," as it is called, is an arduous task and the steam for one is enough for several people, according to a correspondent in the Detroit News.

All afternoon the housewife is kept busy heating great stones in the bath house oven. Then when the bathers—or bathers, as the case may be—is ready, she throws water over the rocks, so causing the room to fill with clouds of hot steam.

Wishing to make the most of opportunity, Finnish bathers stay on a platform near the roof, where the hottest steam collects. Once perspiration sets in, someone rubs the bather's back with a branch of birch leaves. The aroma from these is quite pleasant and fills the bath house.

After they have steamed well, the bathers like to cool off by taking a dip in one of Finland's many lakes. If there is none nearby, they must be satisfied with a cold shower, or in winter a hurried roll in a snow bank.

The Finns are so fond of their steam baths that farmers often build their bath houses before constructing their home, and all the large cities have public bath houses.

Drowning Persons

It is a common belief that drowning persons rise three times, but according to the United States public health service, it has no scientific basis. Many drowning persons do not come to the surface at all after their first submergence. When a person finds himself drowning he naturally makes a frantic struggle to save his life. In doing so he draws water into his windpipe, which causes him to cough and expel air from his lungs. He then sinks. If all the air is expelled from his lungs he will not rise to the surface at all, especially if he is fully clothed. On the other hand, a drowning person who has some control over himself may sink and rise more than three times before his strength fails completely.

Pheasants Poor Mothers

While the incubator is a satisfactory method of hatching pheasants, the hen has many advantages in caring for the little ones. As mothers, pheasants in captivity leave much to be desired. Instead of worrying with a home and family, the real mothers spend their summer roaming in a large field and "looking pretty."

Navajo Woman Boss of Wigwam, Says Authority on Indian Customs

White women insist on their rights and fight for independence. Navajo women are such complete bosses in the wigwam they don't have to worry about emancipation.

They head their clans, which are established on the mother's side, and holds the strings of the family purse because the Navajo wealth is in sheep, which are handed down from mother to daughter.

This is divulged by Wick Miller, who has given much time and study to Indian arts and customs.

"Navajo women don't argue about equal rights," he said. "And they don't insist on deferential gestures; they know their word is final, their position is enviable."

One of the Navajo weavers, Eekhpah (Coming Again Woman), substantiated this idea. "I don't argue about my rights," she said. "I don't even think about them, and neither does any other Navajo woman."

Dressed in deer-skin moccasins and a gayly colored skirt topped by a dark velveteen blouse, Eekhpah fingered her turquoise-set bracelets and talked quietly about the customs of her people.

"Our women keep busy," she explained, "with making blankets and rugs. We get the wool from our sheep, comb and card it, and then spin it on that." She pointed to a distaff, a remnant of the ancient type of spinning wheel.

She further explained that the wool is dyed after it is spun and then woven into rugs and blankets on a loom.

Eekhpah speaks English as well as a white woman for she went away to school. Returning to her tribe, she married a young brave who already had a wife and baby.

"I didn't want to marry him. I didn't love," she confessed. "But my people persuaded me to marry him. Now, I no longer live with him; I am divorced."

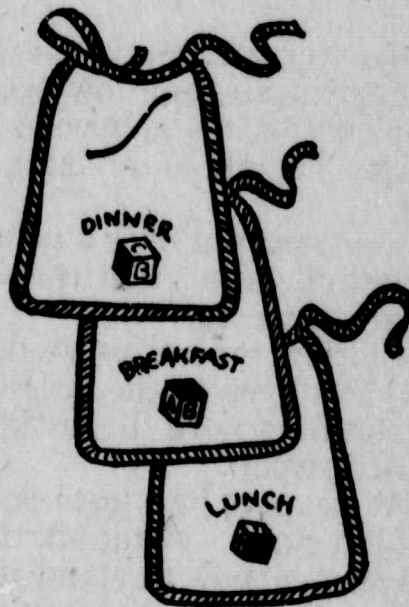

Divorce among the Navajos consists in separation without benefit of a court decree. Marriage, also, often takes place without a ceremony. The common procedure is for the Navajo maiden and her lover to begin living under the same shelter, thereby announcing to the clan they are married. Occasionally, after the first child is born, they have a marriage ceremony.

"It is not strange," said Eekhpah, "for a Navajo man to have more than one wife at the same time. But the woman never has two husbands unless one is dead or unless she has a divorce."

Simple Set of Bibs For the Little One

Crude Press-Agency

Moving picture press-agency has at times been hectic. But an all-time low seems to have been set with the propagation in Hollywood of a story to the effect that Shirley Temple is having a love affair with a 10-year-old boy.

Someone put over a picture of these two children, with a caption stating that they are principals in Hollywood's latest "romance."

Shirley, we are assured, "fell hard" for the curly hair and dark eyes of the lad.

Nothing more disgusting than this has ever come out of Hollywood.

We expect bad taste occasionally in the press-agency of adult stars. After all, they are presumably old and intelligent enough to stand it.

But that anyone should be so abysmally crude and stupid as to think that an obviously faked tale about a "romance" between two ten-year-olds would either please the general public or make life decenter and pleasanter for the children themselves is hard to believe.—Vancouver Sun.

CHRISTMAS STORY CONTEST WINNERS

Following are the three articles written by students of the Jefferson School which were adjudged the best in the order of their appearance.

The Xmas Servers

Years ago on the Xmas day Jesus Christ was born in the manger in Bethlehem, a little Douglas Fir tree sprouted on this low field plain in this dry country.

This little tree grew and grew as years past onward, and gave shelter from the Planet Ra to many families. It had many hardships as people have. Many a time it would want thirst of water and shelter from the blazing sun, yet it struggled for existence trying to serve and protect humanity as Christ did.

Years past on, and Jesus also had his hardships. He was soon to be crucified by the jealous people under the rule of King Herod.

Now, these wicked men were looking for a very sturdy and staunch looking tree, when they happened to come across this Douglas Fir. "This will serve as a wonderful crucifixion," said one of the men. "Yes, it is even too good for the unworthy Christ," said another. Then the commander of the men ordered two of these unkind scoundrels to chop it down.

The men didn't bother shaving the bark off, but just placed its outcome; a crudely made scaffold into the ground.

"Hence what price surviving?" thought the tree. Yet, when Christ became its companion it thought otherwise. For it was willing to die with, and for, so great a personage, "The Creator."

The Xmas Spirit

One cold wintry Xmas Eve a poor lad was trudging home through the snow. As the snow storm was so severe the shivering boy sought shelter in a barn until the storm would lessen. It began to grow dark and the boy, crouched in a corner, soon fell fast asleep.

Conscious of Xmas Eve to his last awakened moment, the unfortunate boy dreamed of air castles that were continually in his mind that night.

He lived in a land where he had life-comforts. He had joyful things and a beautiful Xmas tree. He could see gifts and unlimited provisions everywhere. He had hung his stocking and gone to sleep when lo! he was awakened by the howling wind. What a shame thought the boy to be awakened from such a dream. He was astonished when he saw no Xmas tree, and he became disheartened. His dream was not true. He walked slowly toward home. Suddenly a man on a sleigh drawn by reindeer rode by and asked, "Why are you so sad?" The lad said, "I dreamed of happy Xmas" only to awaken and find myself in a barn. The man, who had spoken, looked like a jolly, old man with a red cherry nose. He had long white hair, and a white beard. He then cheerfully cried, "I'm the Spirit of Xmas," and bring joy into hearts. Go home, my son, a surprise awaits you." The lad was overjoyed, for he recognized this cheery friend as St. Nicholas.

DESMOND EPIDENDIO.

The Boy Who Found the Fairy

In the cold forest lived a little girl and boy. The girl was blind and because of their poverty she could not have a doctor to cure her.

Christmas was near; even though they had hardly a crust of bread, they did have a little tree, but it had no pretty lights on it.

The boy whose name was Ram heard of the fairy godmother of all children, who would grant them any wish they desired. Ram wanted to go and find her, but didn't know what to do with his sister Grany who couldn't take care of herself. He thought of the village blacksmith.

Early the next morning he packed some bread crusts and left on his long journey through the forest. After awhile he became hungry and stopped to eat a bread crust. As he started to take a bite, he saw a little old woman.

She knelt down and said, "Oh please give me a bite of your bread." The boy seeing she was hungry gave her the little he had. Then he asked her, "Do you know where the fairy godmother lives?" She looked at him with surprise and said, "I am the fairy godmother. What do you want?" He said, "I want to wish." She asked him what his wishes were. Immediately Ram wished for a good Xmas dinner and for his sister to get well.

The fairy gave him his wish because he was so kind. She then told him that some people have been unkind to her, and how some thought they would find her pretty and wealthy.

Thus Ram had a merry Christmas for being kind and thoughtful.

SAFE DRIVER MENTAL POISE

Safe driving requires concentration and calm mental poise that is usually lacking in the makeup of the grouch or the driver with the hair trigger temper, says an expert. All motorists are urged to co-operate with the authorities cheerfully during the holiday season.

The selfish driver is a champion fault finder who resorts to general condemnation of the driving practices of others, while considering himself an expert.

In his opinion there are no good drivers. They all drive too slow or too fast; they turn too short or not short enough; they fail to signal or signal too much; their lights are too bright or too dim. In fact, they don't do anything right—and they're crazy and dumb—etc., etc.

And so he speeds along, so busy picking flaws in the actions of others that he forgets to be careful himself.

When driving, better not waste time brooding over the sins of the other fellow. Let's correct our own first.

And keep that temper!

The largest elephant at the Philadelphia Zoo consumes a daily ration of 100 pounds of hay, 10 quarts of crushed vegetables and 16 quarts of oats and bran.

ELECTRIC RATES FOR APPLIANCES TO BE LOWERED

Other Forms Of Service Have Also Been Reduced Considerably

Customers of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for domestic electric service will find the rate reductions recently announced by the company's management reflected in their bills for December service.

The new rates will enable the housewife not only to use more electricity for the same money but, also, to considerably increase her monthly consumption at a quite inconsiderable increase in expense.

In all incorporated cities and towns served by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company the top rate for residential service is cut from 4.5 cents to 4 cents per kilowatt hour, plus service charge. This applies to the first block, which now becomes 40 kilowatt hours; under the former schedule the first block was set at 30 kilowatt hours, plus 5 kilowatt hours for each room over six in the residence. Where the household consumption exceeds 40 kilowatt hours, the charge for additional service up to 200 kilowatt hours will at the rate of 2.5 cents instead of, as at present, 3.5 cents. This is particularly interesting for the reason that the average monthly domestic consumption of electricity is estimated at 60 kilowatt hours. For this amount the cost to the domestic consumer will be but $2.10, plus service charge, showing a reduction of a fraction over 10 per cent as compared with the charge under the outgoing rate schedule. Reduction percentages increase with greater consumption, rising to about 21 per cent on 170 kilowatts.

In territory outside of incorporated cities and towns the rates for service are slightly higher, and reduction percentages somewhat less.

A practical illustration is afforded by estimates made by experts who make the domestic service problem their life study. They figure that a monthly consumption of 40 kilowatt hours will enable the housewife, with reasonable economy, to take care of her lighting fixtures and a number of household appliances, including her electric iron, toaster, percolator, waffle iron and vacuum cleaner. A trifling increase in consumption will enable her to add the washing machine and auxiliary heater to her list, besides making welcome additions to her lighting facilities. The inducement is great on the face of it. The new rates for electric service have been made possible by the increased domestic consumption which resulted from the offer, made effective in the beginning of 1935, of a 50 per cent reduction in the charge for all electric service exceeding that reflected in the consumer's bill for the corresponding month of the previous year in the same location. The hope was expressed at the time that this offer would so stimulate the use of electricity as to justify a reduction in the regular schedules. So it has turned out.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." These words from Isaiah comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, December 29, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

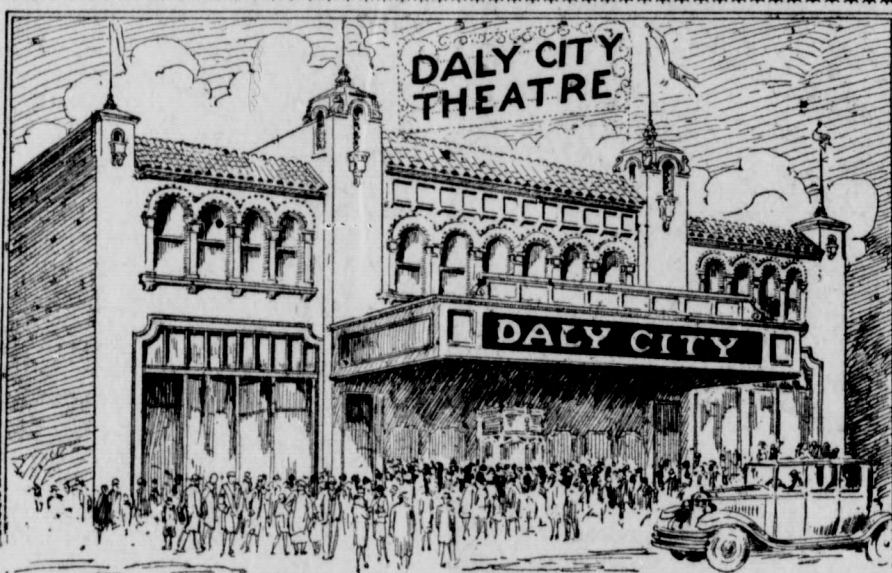

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Christian Science." Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord. As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; My spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever" (Isa. 59: 20, 21).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Science is an emanation of divine Mind, and is alone able to interpret God aright. It has a spiritual, and not a material origin. It is a divine utterance,—the Comforter which leadeth into all truth" (p. 127).

Gauge Against Gauge

If you have not been doing it, make it a practice to check one gauge on the instrument board against the other.

The motor head indicator, for instance, is an almost perfect check on the oil gauge. If the pressure on the latter drops, the temperature of the former will rise correspondingly, especially if the oil quantity has diminished to the danger point.

APPRECIATE EFFORTS OF FIRST AID UNIT

The following letter from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, which is self-explanatory, has been received by Chief Chesney of the Daly City Fire Department:

Mr. A. P. Chesney,
Chief, Fire Department,
Daly City, California.

My dear Sir:
Noting your letter of December 4 in the matter of expense incurred by your Department in your co-operating with this Company in an endeavor to save the life of one of our employees, George E. Grider who was fatally injured on December 3, I am handing you herewith our voucher draft in reimbursement of same.

In this connection, I desire to express to you and through you to Messrs. Peterson, Banfield, and Pfeiffer, the men comprising your First Aid Unit, the appreciation of the Management Officers of our Company for the extreme efforts which were put forth by them in an endeavor to resuscitate Mr. Grider in co-operation with our own men, and for their assistance in this humanitarian act.

Again thanking you and assuring you of our desire at all times to co-operate to the fullest extent wherein our mutual interests are concerned, I am with compliments of the season

Yours very truly,

HENRY BOSTWICK,

Manager, San Francisco Division.

RELIGION IN THE NEWS

(By Rev. Miles Dawson)

The other day I sat in the presence of that powerful personality, Toyohiko Kagawa of Japan. Any fancier or student of physiognomy might thrill at a study of his countenance. But behind that outward man is a spiritual, powerful personality that glows with splendid Christian manhood.

Kagawa is the best known social worker of Japan. Although he was called radical, he automatically emerged from a position of scorn and hatred to the leadership of the social rehabilitation of Tokyo and Yokohama, following the great destructive earthquake of 1923. His interest, he said the other day, is in the establishing of co-operatives. It is for this stand he is termed "radical." His system of co-operatives calls for seven distinct units: one for insurance companies; another for such social institutions as church, school, relief, etc.; another for producers; still another for consumers, etc.

He gave, for example, the story of his co-operative hospital in Japan. A private hospital there will charge 250 yen for an appendectomy; a public hospital will charge 180 yen; while his co-operative hospital, supported by several thousands who subscribe one yen per month for ten months each year, will charge 35 yen for the same operation. "And there is still some profit," he added.

Where Does the World Get Its Supply of Oil?

Three Nations Control Output of Industries' Lifeblood.

Discussion of oil embargoes in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian war raises the question: "Where does the world get its oil?" Petroleum deposits have been found in every continent except Antarctica, but well-defined pools are widely scattered. Actually, a very few nations control the supply of this lifeblood of modern industry.

"Three countries produce about 81 per cent of the world's petroleum output," says the National Geographic society. "These are the United States, Soviet Russia and Venezuela. If all three should cut off their oil supplies, many steamships, trucks, automobiles, armored tanks, airplanes and railroads all over the world would be stopped, as well as industries depending on oil for fuel or lubrication. Great Britain, through her control of distribution of oil produced in her dominions and colonies, and in many other countries, also is a powerful factor in the world's oil situation.

Italy Produces Little Oil.
"A general oil embargo would practically threaten Italy's motors with starvation, for Italy, in the entire year of 1934, produced only as much oil as the United States does in about two hours.

"Almost 99 per cent of the world's oil comes from only twelve countries. Italy is but one of the many nations which would have to combine their petroleum resources to make up the other 1 per cent.

"While the three leading nations are making production history by their thundering progress along the oil trail, four others follow them in a group, although many laps behind

Rumania, Iran (Persia), Netherlands Indies, and Mexico. Almost neck and neck, five more follow along: Colombia, Argentina, Peru, India, and Trinidad, which produce less than 1 per cent of the world's annual output each.

Oil Also Found Under Water.

"The distribution of petroleum seems to show a slight preference for the western hemisphere and for the northern side of the equator. Nevertheless, it is found in such extremes as Iraq, where iron-muscle Kurds work in July heat at 128 degrees in the shade, and north of Point Barrow in Alaska, where frozen clods of oil-soaked earth are burned as a substitute for coal.

"Water, as well as earth, may lie above petroleum. Venezuela's Lake Maracaibo, black with oil, is studded with derricks which workmen reach by bridges of narrow planks from the shore, and is supervised from a floating camp on a barge. The Summerland field of Santa Barbara county, California, extends beyond the shoreline of the Pacific, so that derricks wade into the ocean to draw up oil from several hundred feet below sea level.

"The United States leads the world in oil production. Recently a diamond jubilee marked the industry's seventy-fifth anniversary since Col. Edwin Drake sank the country's first oil well 70 feet into the rich Appalachian field at Titusville, Pa. Oil is still produced in Pennsylvania, especially for the manufacture of lubricants.

Texas Fields Date From 1901.

"In 1901 the rich Texas oil fields were brought in, starting a branch of the industry which in 1934 produced $36,000,000 worth of oil, more than the combined production of the two next richest areas, Oklahoma and California. The latest spectacular development is that of the Louisiana Gulf coast, which doubled its production in 1934. One geologist estimates that the United States, already producing 61 per cent of the world's oil from its two million acres of oil fields, actually has more than a billion acres untouched.

"Running second, Soviet Russia's government-controlled oil production rose in 1934 to 166,000,000 barrels, with acres and acres of oil seepages undeveloped or even unprospected.

"Venezuela keeps third place as a gait which is amazing, in view of the fact that commercial production began there less than twenty years ago. Petroleum constitutes 75 per cent of the country's exports. Rumania, taking fourth place from Iran in 1934, still has many undeveloped areas.

Advice of Old Usable for Straight Thinking Today

When we become angry our thinking gets crooked, and when we grow too fond of ways that are not right we cannot properly judge what is the true course to follow. Archbishop Adalberto, when presiding nearly a thousand years ago at an assemblage for the choice of a king for Lower Lorraine, in what is now France, warned his hearers of these obstacles to clear thinking by saying:

"Let us act in such sort that hatred stifle not reason, and affection distort not truth."

Could there be a better expression of what should be the attitude of folks today?

Dog Saved 40 Persons

One of the most intelligent dogs was "Barry," a St. Bernard belonging to the famous St. Bernard Hospice in the Swiss Alps. Before he was shot by a man who mistook him for a wolf, he saved the lives of 40 travelers who were lost and near death in snowstorms, one being a little girl whom he carried to safety.

WHEN TIRE DELAYS STOLE PROFITS— SENT DELIVERY COSTS SKYWARD . . .

THEY CHANGED TO Firestone GUM-DIPPED TIRES

TIRE delays were playing havoc with this man's business. Treads wore down fast—they failed to hold on slippery pavements. The situation was serious—something had to be done to lower costs and maintain on-time deliveries.

So he changed to Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires! And now his troubles are over! For Firestone Tires are built with patented construction features and stand up under most gruelling conditions.

The Gum-Dipped cord body prevents internal friction and heat—chief cause of premature wear and blowouts. The two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords securely lock the massive non-skid tread and cord body together. These patented features are used in no other tire.

Colma News Notes

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Remington, Jr. and children spent a happy Christmas at the home of Mr. Remington's father, H. L. Remington Sr., at his home in Santa Cruz.

Holy Angels Church was the scene of a colorful Christmas tree party, Sunday afternoon of this week, given in honor of the young folks who have attended Sunday School during the past year. Each was given a gift and a box of candy.

Louis Cosiglia, employed at the Colma Box and Drum Factory, is at the Villa Sanatorium this week, suffering from a hand infection.

Mrs. H. L. Remington of Railroad avenue was a luncheon guest, Friday afternoon of last week, at the home of Mrs. Frank Rauh in San Francisco. Mrs. Rauh, formerly of Colma, is a recent bride.

Johnny Pitcher, who is now residing on Bryant street, visited with his family at Half Moon Bay on Christmas Day.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Andereggen had as their Christmas dinner guests, Mr. and Mrs. L. Jost and family.

Mrs. Di Santoro of Colma was the lucky winner of the patchwork quilt which was raffled, Monday afternoon of this week, at Dave's Market, by Mrs. C. Gatliff. The winning ticket was No. 530.

Mrs. E. Rogers of Oakland was a visitor, Christmas Day, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Benedetti.

Louis Wallace and Robert Dennis enjoyed a Christmas dinner as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. Simond and their two daughters, Louise and Dolly.

TWO SMALL FIRES

The Colma Volunteer Fire Department held its regular monthly meeting, Thursday evening of last week. Officers were nominated and regular business conducted.

The department responded to two fire alarms during the week. One was at the home of Dr. M. Hechter in the Garibaldi building, where Christmas tree decorations had ignited; the other was at the Kluge residence, near the Thornton Grammar School, originating a defective flue.

Both fires were extinguished before any appreciable damage was done.

FIRE DEPARTMENT ELECTS OFFICERS

The various stations of the Daly City Fire Department have all held their annual elections, and the following persons have been selected by the members to serve them as officers for the year 1936.

Station No. 1—Captain, Kai Petersen; lieutenant, Frank Shaw; secretary, Dean Woods; treasurer, Gus Shenck; deputy marshal, M. Goldberg.

Station No. 2—Captain, Elmer Kennedy; lieutenant, R. Saunders; secretary-treasurer, R. Rickman.

Station No. 3—Captain, Theo. Wickersham; lieutenant, R. John Ferro; secretary, Al. Green; treasurer, C. Tacchi; deputy marshal, L. Kennedy.

Station No. 4—Captain, Ernest Cuheo; lieutenant, John Coleman; secretary, Andy Chesney; treasurer, Arthur Hilton; deputy marshal, R. Foppiano; engineer, V. Fenstermacher.

Station No. 5—Captain, J. Cosbie; lieutenant, C. Brady; secretary-treasurer, C. Rinehart; deputy marshal, J. Albonsky.

Station No. 6—Captain, Leo Kusber; lieutenant, George Volkman; secretary, A. J. Conci; treasurer, Eugene Graziani; deputy marshal, Gino Benedetti.

PIONEER MATRON CALLED BY DEATH

Mrs. Marie Fanger of Oliver street, wife of Jacob Fanger, passed away, Monday of this week, in St. Luke's Hospital following a brief illness of three days duration. Deceased was a pioneer resident of the west end, where a host of friends will be shocked to learn of her sudden death.

Her husband and five children—Mrs. Minnie Barner, Mrs. Mary Oberg, Charles A., Joseph F., and Henry W. Brecker—survive her.

The funeral was conducted from a San Francisco undertaking establishment, Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock, thence to St. Anthony's Church, where a requiem high mass was celebrated for the repose of her soul commencing at 10 o'clock. Interment took place at Holy Cross Cemetery.

In a white shroud she had sewed by hand and embroidered two years ago in anticipation of her death, Mrs. Lucy A. Hodgkins, 79, was buried at Coldwater, Mich., recently.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS GIVE XMAS PARTY

(By W. J. Lehigh)

Monday evening, December 23, Old Glory Post and its Auxiliary gave a Christmas tree party for the children of its members and immediate family. The youngsters enjoyed themselves thoroughly and their little hands clapped for joy as Santa Claus entered to distribute the presents, of which there were plenty for all. The distribution of gifts was preceded by various Xmas entertainment, given entirely by Post and Auxiliary talent.

The Junior Boys Corps brought back memories of the days of 1917 with their buffoonery and "Parlez Vous" verses. The verses were about members of the Post and were composed by Director of Juniors, Comrade Sender. Several songs were rendered and also a trombone duet.

The Girls Corps, under the direction of Mrs. Lehigh, assisted by Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Dillon, presented two little sketches entitled "The Christmas Angel" and "The Runaway Rabbit." The girls and ladies worked hard to put these plays over and deserve credit for the successful manner in which the entertainment was conducted. An accordion solo and a variety of songs and dances by the girls completed the entertainment.

A chorus by the boys and girls of the popular song, "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town," brought a handsome Santa on the run to distribute the presents under a nicely decorated tree.

Many of the Post and Auxiliary members also deserve credit for giving their time and labor to decorate the tree.

It may be added here the talent displayed by both the Junior Corps was a surprise to many of the members and the parents may well be proud of their children.

Don't forget the next meeting in Little Italy Hall, on Friday, December 27, the last one of the old year. Come and show your Xmas presents to the boys.

The Cootties will have a meeting in the same hall on the following evening, Saturday the 28th. If you feel included to join a fun-loving group of boys come up and see us.

We regret to hear that Commander Jensen has an injury and is confined to quarters with his foot in a cast. Best wishes for a speedy healing, Olie.

Old Glory Post No. 2044, V. F. W., wishes to extend to all a Happy and Most Prosperous New Year.

HOT CONTEST FOR LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

Fans should witness a spirited game, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the Harrison street diamond.

Daly City Tanforan and the Lomita Fire Department teams will meet for the league leadership. If the home team wins Sunday, they will win the league pennant, as they have won 7 and lost but 1 game, while their opponents now stand at 7 won 2 lost.

Moving pictures will be taken of this game, which will be displayed at an exhibition in Daly City at some future date.

SUNDAY SERVICES AT CALVARY CHURCH

The services, Sunday, at the Calvary Baptist Church, 5724 Mission street, will be appropriate to the New Year season. The pastor, Miles Dawson, will speak at both services, and the choir will sing.

On Tuesday evening a Watch Night service will be conducted from 9 to 12:01 p. m. From 9 to 10 a prayer meeting, from 10 to 11 a social hour, and from 11 to 12:01, a communion and prayer service, bringing in the New Year.

Andrew Weyms of Chicago cut the gas pipes in four homes and caused the serious illness of 17 persons, to get revenge because neighbors criticized him.

NEW LICENSE TIME BEGINS ON JANUARY 2, 1936

Time to renew automobile registration and obtain 1936 plates is close at hand for California motorists. The renewal period opens on January 2. Important facts concerning the renewal procedure are summarized as follows:

Car owners should be careful not to mislay or destroy postcard notices that are being mailed by the Department of Motor Vehicles telling the amount of the new additional license fee based on car value. These notices should be carefully preserved so as to be able to present them in applying for 1936 plates.

The new fee is at the rate $1.75 per $100 of valuation and is in addition to the regular $3 registration fee.

The dead line for renewal is January 30, when a delinquent penalty adding 100 per cent to the new fee, doubling it, becomes effective.

Registration certificates for 1935, stamped by the assessor to show current personal property tax payment, must also be presented when applying for renewal of registration. These taxes will hereafter be replaced by the new additional license fee.

Any change of address should be noted on the certificate. When the legal owner is being released or when there is a transfer of ownership, the ownership certificate as well as registration certificate must be presented. Both must also be presented if there are any changes or corrections other than a change of address.

Plates will be issued by the Department of Motor Vehicles at offices in various principal cities and at Highway Patrol Offices. Mail applications will be received by the Sacramento office of the department.

The California Automobile Association will conduct a license renewal and plate issuance service for members at each of its thirty-three offices in northern and central California.

PRESBYTERIAN MINISTER WILL VISIT SAN QUENTIN

At the request of one of the directors of San Quentin prison, Rev. John R. Stevenson will conduct religious services there on Sunday morning.

On his return to his pulpit in the evening he will tell some incidents of prison life which have come under his observation.

The pulpit of Grace Presbyterian Church will be occupied in the morning at 11 o'clock by Rev. R. C. Chaplin, an evangelist of Prairie. This remarkable evangelist will relate some of his experiences during the service.

WPA ABSORBS 283 WORKERS

Approximately 283 men are employed on WPA projects in this county at the present time, County Engineer Urban S. Marshall revealed this week.

A total of 35 men are working on the Woodside road culvert near Redwood City; 152 are employed on the San Francisco Creek project; 31 are working on the Jefferson avenue widening project in Redwood City, and 16 are laboring on the Miramar Park parking area project.

Engineer Marshall also revealed that the cement plant road project had been completed, and that work had been resumed on Unit B of the Woodside road culvert.

CHRISTSMAS PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. George Romiguere of Irvington street entertained at a Christmas party, Tuesday evening of this week. Santa Claus visited during the evening and distributed gifts to all the children, after which tempting refreshments were served to the following: Mrs. Minnie Rancatore and children, Florence, Evelyn and Thomas, Sam Parmisano and daughter Gloria, Mr. and Mrs. James Reardon and children, Marie Arline and James Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Parmisano and children, Corrie and Stanley, Mr. and Mrs. A. Parmisano and son Alfred Jr., Mrs. G. Green and son Gene and Mr. G. Romiguere.

Plan Now to Do More Electrically!

REDUCED
ELECTRIC RATES

THE REDUCED ELECTRIC RATES

Bring to you a Bargain Value in Electric Service. It means you can have better lighting. You can have more electric servants to help you with housework every day. Electricity more than ever is the Biggest Bargain in the Home. Take full advantage of it.

Here's How Cheaply Certain Electrical Servants Work Under the New Low-Cost Electricity:

● If your electric bill has been $2.09 or less per month . . . you can use an electric dishwasher 50 times a month for 13¢, run a washing machine for 11¢ a month, use a vacuum cleaner for 8.3¢ a month.

● Add any one of these electric appliances. Operate it on the savings from the reduced rates. If your electric bill is $2.10 or more your savings are even greater.

● The above figures are based on an estimated average cost for electricity in all incorporated areas. In unincorporated areas the cost is slightly higher.

"Lower the cost of electricity and we will use more electricity." If you have been one of our customers who has said this, now you can put additional electrical servants to work in your home at no additional cost or only slight increase in cost. Electricity right after your December meter reading will be cheaper than ever before.

With the new reduced rates, the unit cost of electricity steps down sharply as you add certain essential and labor-saving electrical servants. An electric refrigerator is one of these. A washing machine and ironer or a vacuum cleaner, electric heater or larger floor and table lamps that give better light for better sight. Any or all of these electric servants would make ideal gifts this Christmas. You can add certain of these appliances without increasing your monthly bill and you can add all of them with only a slight increase in your bill.

You will find special Christmas displays of electric appliances in stores everywhere and in all our offices. See them. Ask to have them demonstrated. Make THIS an electrical Christmas in your home.

This 20-ton granite monument of Santa Claus was donated to the little town of Santa Claus, Ind., by Carl A. Barrett, Chicagoan, who is seen beside the statue. Mr. Barrett also gave the park in which the monument is placed.

OBSERVATION OF NEW YEARS DAY

In almost every country the first day of the calendar year is observed, usually with religious ceremonies, preceded or followed by festivities. This spirit of gaiety predominates in the Orient. Homes are decorated, gifts are exchanged and the greetings of the season are extended to friends and even to strangers. The custom is also prevalent in Europe.

In America there are church services and parties to watch the old year out; theater and dancing parties, and other social entertainments. In fact among the earliest of the nation's celebration similar to those just cited marked the commencement of the year.

The Chinese, the Egyptians, the Jews, the Romans and the Mohammedans observe different days for the beginning of the year.

In ancient Rome, their year began in March and the day was sacred to Janus, whose two faces were typical of the attitude of the people toward a day which gave them cause for reflection on the past and thought for the future. Presents were exchanged, and, during the time of the empire, the custom of giving to the emperor became so general that the entire populace brought gifts and wished him good fortune.

It is only since the sixteenth century, when the gregorian calendar was adopted, that January first has become generally recognized as New Year's Day.

The Jewish New Year, which occurs about the time of the autumnal equinox, is a feast day, and is the first of several days of religious commemoration.
